BRITAIN'S QUEEN.

Attempted Assassination of Queen Victoria.

LONDON, March 2.—A Press Association dispatch says Queen Victoria was fired at at Windsor railway station to-day. She escaped unhurt.

As the Queen was entering her carriage this evening a man in the station yard deliberately fired a pistol shot at her. The man, who was a miserable looking object, was immediately seized by several policemen and taken to the Windsor police station. No one was hurt.

The Queen drove off to the castle immediately after she was fired at. The assassin was followed to the police station by a large crowd of people. Newspaper hawkers are now crying the news on the London streets. It causes a great sensation.

The assassin gives his name as Rodrick MacLean. He was with difficulty rescued from the crowd. The Queen arrived at Windsor about 5:30. She had been in London since Tuesday where she gave a drawing-room Wednesday in honor of Princess Helen of Waldeck, who is to marry Prince Leopold.

A crowd assembled at Buckingham Palace this morning in hopes to see the Queen drive out. The demeanor of the people was cordial. As usual there was a large crowd of spectators awaiting the Queen's arrival at Windsor. The Queen walked across the platform of the railway station to a carriage which was waiting to take her to the castle. John Brown had already ascended to his seat behind the carriage when a man standing at the entrance of the station yard, among the spectators, pointed a pistol at the carriage and fired. To judge from the report the pistol was not loaded. The Queen, who was not aware of what happened, was immediately driven to the castle, but before she passed by the man had been seized by the Superintendent of the Borough police who was standing near by, and also violently seized by the crowd and only rescued when three or four policemen came to the Superintendent's assistance. The pistol was captured by one of the crowd. MacLean, who was miserably clad, was taken into High street, and thence conveyed to the police station in a cab.

As soon as the Queen arrived at the castle she ordered the equestrian to proceed to the depot to inquire if any one had been hurt. The report of the pistol was sharp, but not loud. MacLean apparently intended firing again, when the revolver, which seemed to be a new one, was knocked from his hand by a bystander and handed to the police.

Eton scholars were prominent in the attempt to lynch MacLean. Posenby, the Queen's secretary, proceeded to the police station, and after obtaining all information possible telegraphed to Gladstone the facts of the assault. It is understood the Queen has not sustained any shock. The report of the pistol was sharp, but not loud. MacLean is said to be an inhabitant of the South Sea. The general opinion is the act was the result of lunacy.

OBITUARY.

Boston, Mass., March 2.—The Hon. Charles Hale, former editor of the Daily Advertiser, and at one time United States Consul-General to Egypt, died today, aged 51 years. His father was Nathan Hale, founder of the Advertiser. His mother was a sister of Edward Everett, and his surviving brother is Edward Everett Hale, the author and preacher. Charles Hale served in both branches of the State Legislature for many years, and was twice chosen Speaker of the House. He had been ill for many months.

A Cross Baby.

Nothing is so conducive to a man's remaining a bachelor as stopping for one night at the house of a married friend and being kept awake for five or six hours by the crying of a cross baby. All cross and crying babies need only Hop Bitters to make them well and smiling. Young man, remember this.—Ed.

FAIRCHILD'S RETURN.

Heartily Welcome Extended to Him by Madisonians.

MADISON, March 2.—Ex-Gov. Lucius Fairchild, for six years the executive head of this State, and latterly consul to Liverpool and minister to Spain, arrived home in Madison at 5 o'clock this evening, after an absence of nine years. He was given a hearty welcome by his old friends and neighbors. There was an immense crowd at the Northwestern depot in East Madison when the train bringing home the favorite son arrived. Owing to the muddy streets the procession was not as imposing as was desired.

Upon the arrival of the train and while the band was playing, General Fairchild alighted and was escorted to the third carriage, in which he was seated with Governor Rusk, Lieutenant Governor Fildes and Speaker Gilson. In the procession were several members of the Iron Brigade, in which General Fairchild fought, and also several members of the Second Wisconsin Regiment, which General Fairchild commanded.

When the procession arrived at the east door of the capitol the military drew up in a line before the State house steps and the carriages were unloaded. After a few moments spent inside General Fairchild and the State officers reappeared and the ceremonies began. Colonel W. P. Vaas was the first speaker. He paid a graceful and eloquent tribute to General Fairchild's life, character, and public services, during two years' service as Secretary of State, six years as governor of Wisconsin, nine years in the diplomatic service—first as consul to Liverpool, second as consul-general to Paris, and latterly as minister of the United States to the court of his old friends. He came back, he said, after all this absence, as thoroughly a lover of Wisconsin, as loyal a citizen of the town and State as when he went away. Not a day or an hour had passed during his absence when he had not thought of his home and country. Few have the pleasure of returning home amid auspicious surroundings. To-day he experienced the pleasure in extreme. He thanked the gentlemen who had voiced the welcome now tendered him for their kind words of praise; and if he deserved one tenth part of what had been said he would be satisfied.

At this point the ex-Governor's feelings overcame him and he suddenly closed with tears streaming down his cheeks. Three vigorous cheers were then given after which General Fairchild held a reception in the executive office, where hundreds called to pay their respects.

REELECTED.

LONDON, March 2.—In the Parliamentary election at Northampton to-day, Bradlaugh received 3,738 votes and Corbett 3,687.

GREAT DEVASTATION.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 2.—News reaches here of terrible destruction of property by the breaking of the levee at Carson's Landing. After the heavy rain and windstorm of Tuesday, a gap of 75 feet was first made by the rushing water, and 100 yards of the levee soon swept away. The noise of the roaring flood woke the sleeping citizens, who, looking out of their homes, saw the river rapidly spreading over the country. Without taking time to clothe themselves the people fled for their lives. Ben Haines, the keeper of the landing, and two negroes, were overwhelmed in the rushing water. Their cries for help were heartrending. Many people had narrow escapes from drowning.

In the vicinity of Bolivar 250 yards of the levee gave way, and between Catfish Point and Mound Landing, a distance of six miles, the levee broke in four places. In Arkansas City the water covers the floor of every street and dwelling from six inches to four feet. The water covers the floor of the hotel to the depth of twenty inches. Many of the planters are feeding their hands, fearing that the movement to furnish rations will demoralize the negroes. Many negroes are anxiously awaiting the boat with the government rations. Boats are moving persons and property free where people are too poor to pay for the service.

SUDDEN DEATH.

MILWAUKEE, March 2.—James W. Carter, brother of the warden of the Wisconsin State prison, at Waupun, was found to-day dead in the road near August, Wisconsin. Death resulted from congestion of the brain.

CLEVELAND "MEDIUMS."

CLEVELAND, O., March 2.—Archibald Christie, the pretended materialistic medium, who successfully gullied the gullible spiritualists of high and low degree in Cleveland, is once more at liberty to perpetrate his frauds on the believers in the theory that souls of the departed trot back and forth across the deadlines at the will of the medium.

His and wife's trial for obtaining money from his dupes by false pretenses was concluded to-day, and the case against him dismissed, for the reason that none of those taken in were willing to acknowledge it, but preferred to pocket their loss, and wait for the next seance where his impudently circumstances may "inspire" him with powers greater than those of the ordinary mortals.

Before the Christies were exposed, dozens of influential citizens told their friends that what they had seen at Christie's was in truth the materialized form of spirits. When put on the witness stand after the exposure they claimed that they had not much confidence in the genuineness of the exhibition, but were willing to acknowledge it, but preferred to pocket their loss, and wait for the next seance where his impudently circumstances may "inspire" him with powers greater than those of the ordinary mortals.

Justice Griswold, in dismissing the case said he had no patience with any one who could expect to rematerialize spirits, and thought such person must be either grossly deceived or a fool, knave, or lunatic. This was hitting some of the first citizens hard.

SUICIDE.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 2.—J. C. Jones committed suicide here to-day by taking morphine. As to his determination to commit suicide there is no doubt, as before taking the deadly poison he informed parties of his intention of self-destruction. The cause assigned was that he was out of employment, and the fact of having a wife and two children dependent upon him drove him to the extreme. Until recently Jones was employed by Hamilton & Hutchins, a wholesale firm of this city, as one of their traveling men. This is the second time that he has taken poison with the determination of killing himself. Upon each occasion the excuse given for taking it was because he was out of work and had a wife and children to support.

CONTEST FOR A JUDGESHIP.

GALENA, Ill., March 2.—Judge M. M. Cothren, of the Fifth judicial district of Wisconsin, whose term is about to expire, is the central actor in a political farce now being played by his party adherents, with a view to his re-election to the bench over the Hon. George R. Clementson, of Lancaster, whom the Republicans put in nomination last week at Dodgeville. Cothren is a partisan Democrat, yet, for the sake of winning, he is getting ready to come out as an independent candidate, in the hope of thereby drawing votes from all parties. Mr. Clementson's friends are legion, however, and as Cothren has many enemies throughout the district who will make use of the contest to settle old scores, the game which the wily Judge is to play will probably fall far short of winning.

Married Folks Would be Happy

If home trials were never told to neighbors.

If they kissed and made up after every quarrel.

If household expenses were proportioned to receipts.

If they tried to be agreeable as in courtship days.

If each would try and be a support and comfort to each other.

If each remembered the other was a human being, not an angel.

If women were so kind to their husbands as they are to their lovers.

If fuel and provisions were laid in during the high tide of summer.

If both parties remembered that they were married for worse as well as for better.

If men were as thoughtful of their wives as they were for their sweethearts.

If there were fewer silk and velvet street costumes and more plain, tidy house dresses.

If there were fewer "please darlings" in public and more common manners in private.

If wives and husbands would take some pleasure as things go along and not degenerate into mere toiling machines. Recreation is necessary to keep the heart in its place, and to get along without it is a big mistake.—Sunday Courier.

Charlotte Corday's Dress.

Alcibiades is said to have cut off the tail of his dog in order to give the Athenians something to talk about, and to divert their attention from serious topics. Happy the people whose minds can take occasional rest from serious subjects, like politics, in the discussion of trifles! At present the French press is engaged in a grave controversy about the quality and color of the dress which Charlotte Corday wore on the day when she assassinated Marat. Everybody knows that the great demagogue was in his bath at the moment when Mlle. De Corday called at his house, No. 21 Rue de l'Ecole de Medicine, and craved an audience through the medium of his housekeeper. It is also known that she wore what is now called a mob-cap—an article of apparel which came back into fashion a few years ago in England, but which was in 1792 the ordinary head-gear of young ladies hailing from Normandy. Beyond the fact, however, that Charlotte Corday wore a mob-cap, historical searchers can not agree as to her attire. Some say that she presented herself at Marat's house in a dress of striped calico, dusty from travel; others affirm that on alighting in Paris from the Roman stage she went to a hotel and tricked herself out in a dress of spotless white muslin, with a silk kerchief and black mittens. This would have been the most natural course in the case of a young lady of cool mind; but the dispute about Charlotte Corday's dress turns precisely upon the point as to whether this girl was a heroine animated by an implacable spirit of vengeance in a patriotic cause, or a poor half-crazed demented who came up to Paris to kill Marat simply because she feared for the life of her lover Barbaroux. So red republicans who worship the memory of Marat maintain that she wore a rusty red striped calico dress, whereas royalists and others who loathe the editor of L'Ami du Peuple, protest that she went about her fell work robed in white, like an angel.—London News.

American Glass Making.

The first glass factory in America was erected in 1602 near Jamestown, Va., and the second followed in the same colony twelve years later. In 1639 some acres of ground were granted to glassmen in Salem, Mass., probably the first year of the industry which was prosecuted there for many years. The first glass factory in Pennsylvania was built near Philadelphia in 1683, under the direction of Wm. Penn, but did not prove successful. The first glass factory west of the Alleghenies was set up by Albert Gallatin and his associates in 1785, at New Geneva, on the Monongahela River. A small factory was established on the Ohio River, near Pittsburgh, in 1790, and another in 1795. The earlier attempt failed, the later was quite successful. In 1810 there were twenty-two glass factories in the country, with an annual product valued at $1,047,000. There are now about five times as many factories, producing eight times as much glass. According to the returns received under the recent census, our flint glass factories turn out 210,554 tons of table and other glassware, and the window-glass works produce 2,644,440 boxes. The total value of the product is nearly $45,750,000.—Scientific American.

Maggie Mitchell has been on the stage for thirty years. She acknowledges to forty-three, and as she has made a great deal of money people wonder why she does not retire. The truth is that she is not as rich as she was, and her work now is for her children. Some years ago her husband, Paddock, bought the Forest Place at Long Branch, paying seventy-five thousand dollars for it, forty thousand of which was cash down. Time ran on and interest and taxes with it, but the little commedienne in no sense a business woman, and so she left everything to her husband. One day the remaining thirty-five thousand fell due, and could not be met. The place was sold on mortgage, and brought less than her first payment, and she awoke to a realization of the fact that she had a hard time before her, and so the little woman is still on the stage.

Maggie Mitchell, since her first great success in New York, nineteen years ago, has been a carryall for her entire family. She feeds them, lodges them, and clothes them. She has an old father between seventy and eighty who is a veritable "Old Eccles," and the only way he can be kept from giving way to his weakness lies in locking him up and feeding him on regular rations of whiskey. In spite of the familiarity with her plays and acting Maggie Mitchell is still one of the great paying stars of the stage. She makes money constantly and everywhere, and she deserves to. She has created a school in acting, and in her school she is beyond imitation. Few women have given as great pleasure to the public.

AN AMBIDEXTER.

A Reporter Attempts to Publish Copy of a Letter from the State of Speed as a Thing Mixed.

There is a reporter at the Times office who writes with equal rapidity with either hand. He is an ambidexter, and a much better one at that. When there is a rush of work at the office and the devil is shouting "coo!" like a fiend incarnate, this useful reporter sits down at his desk in full company front, and with a pencil in each hand, slings off local happenings by the yard. He writes on two sheets at once, and don't let his right hand know what his left hand is driving at, but it is driving all the same.

Yesterday he got a little off his mental base, and attempted to write up a dog fight and a wedding in high style at the same time. He got things mixed. His hands ran clear away with the gray matter in his skull, and things became terribly confused. This is the way his items telescoped each other:

At Grace church, last night, the nuptials of Mr. Thomas Johnson and Miss Julia Lawrence were celebrated in most magnificent style. A costly floral horse shoe being directly over the altar, and when the yellow cur saw the flames of the altar, he opened with the impressive strains of the wedding march. As the handsome couple walked down the aisle the excited crowd began to get frantic, and there were yells of "Sick 'em, Bull!" "At him now, Towser," as the spectators became interested in the fight. The bride was elegantly attired in pure white of the most costly fabrics, and she wore the traditional white veil and wreath of orange blossoms had laid out by the bride and her tongue began to roll out and his eyes to turn somersaults as if in the customary black dress suit, white gloves, ears cropped close to his head. He was a disreputable looking dog in the beginning, and ought to have been whipped for being so homesy. He is of good family and is engaged in one of the most extensive manufacturing enterprises in the West. But the yellow cur seemed to be getting the advantage, as he had now succeeded in getting a death grip on the throat of the bride, and when he tenderly kissed the bride according to the ancient custom his back was covered with mud and his off hind leg was terribly chewed up.

Among the costly presents received by the happy pair were a fine grand piano from the father of the bride hair had been scalded from his back and one eye seemed to have been struck with an augur. After a short bridal tour the happy pair will settle down to one of the hardest fought battles the reporter has yet witnessed, and it was difficult to tell which dog had been punished worst. The fight ended at exactly 4:48, after having been bitterly contested for an hour and a half were driven to the residence of the bride's parents, and he was taken to his own home in a wheelbarrow. He will probably never recover, and if he does will be totally blind. Besides being permanently lame in the left hind leg, the beautiful bride received the congratulations of a host of friends. The groom is one of our most promising young men, and his own dreads the possibility of losing him as he fears he can never replace him. The father of the bride is one of our wealthiest merchants, and the yellow fistic lipped off with a knowing look in his eye and a saucy curl in his tail, as much as to say: "Who else wants to try me?"

The ambidexter was summarily "fired."

How to Pack.

Even in packing a trunk, a little forethought and planning is necessary. Collect what is most important before you begin, so that you may not leave out any necessary article. Think over what you will be likely to need, for a little care before you start may save you a great deal of inconvenience in the end. When you shut it for the last time, do not leave the straps sticking out upon the outside. Put your heavy things at the bottom, packing them tightly, so that they will not rattle about when the trunk is reversed. Put the small articles in the tray. Anything which will be likely to be scratched or defaced by rubbing, should be wrapped in a handkerchief and laid among soft things. If you must carry anything fragile, do it up carefully, and put it in the center of the trunk, packing clothing closely about it. Bottles should have the corked in with strong twine. Put them near articles which cannot be injured by the contents, if a breaking occurs. Tack on your trunk a card with your permanent address. This is useful if the trunk should happen to be lost. In the traveling-bag you can carry pins, needles, thread, pencil and paper—all necessary in traveling.

The fee of doctors is an item that very many persons are interested in just at present. THE MYSTERY OF FIRES.

Spontaneous Combustion the Chief Cause.

Many a hundred fires yearly remain unexplained, even after the most painstaking and exhaustive investigation. "Among all the wonderful phenomena which chemistry presents to us," writes Professor Weissman, "there are few more remarkable than those of spontaneous combustion of bodies, animate and inanimate, which emit flames, and are sometimes entirely consumed by internal fire." Among the substances subject to spontaneous combustion pulverized charcoal is one of the most remarkable. "A load of charcoal was delivered in an out-house of a clergyman in Leipzig, and showed no signs of taking fire until the door by accident was left open, when the fire broke out, and the out-house was consumed. The rapid absorption of oxygen from the melting snow caused the charcoal to ignite, and as the day was windy the whole range of buildings was burned to ashes." In this connection a fruitful and unsuspected source of fire suggests itself to those of our American housekeepers who burn wood as fuel and who store the ashes in boxes and barrels. The accidental disturbing of such ashes, even after years, will cause them to ignite, provided there is a lamp or foggy. The phosphorus of potash from decayed wood renders wood ashes highly inflammable, and mysterious cellar fires in the rural districts are, no doubt, in some cases caused by this extraordinary form of spontaneous combustion.

Professor Weissman himself had the unfortunate experience of being burned out of house and home on a wild winter night some three years since, and he has since diligently collected facts about spontaneous combustion. It appears that he had been having his house painted, and one night the painters, as their manner is, left their working pants, their pots and their brushes on the asphaltum floor of the cellar. They had previously with a bunch of rags removed from their hands with spirits of turpentine the paint with which they were soiled. The ball of rags took fire, and the paint pots followed suit, and the house was burned to the ground.

In the carriage factory of Messrs. Eaton & Gilbert, Troy, New York, a drop of linseed oil fell into an open barrel of lampblack, set on fire and came within an ace of burning the whole great factory. In several instances oilcloth in large rolls has taken fire in damp, muggy weather. An instance of this also occurs in American fire experience. A planter in Virginia sent his servant to Fredericksburg for a roll of oilcloth. It was a warm day, and the wagon was open. During the journey home it began to rain, and the roll of oilcloth took fire on the road. Another instance of the kind is supplied by Philadelphia during the war. An order from the War Department in Washington for knapsacks for a regiment was filled in the City of Brotherly Love. The sacks were all finished and collected, and counted over and laid in a pile in the paint shop about ten o'clock on Saturday night, so as to be sent to Washington by express on Monday morning. On carrying the paint shop before daylight on Monday morning no knapsacks were to be found. In their place was nothing but a heap of smoldering ashes!

Newly pressed hay frequently ignites, as do also oatmeal and cornmeal in barrels. During the famine in Ireland in 1847-48 a vessel was dispatched from New York with a cargo of cornmeal for the relief of the sufferers. In discharging the bags from the vessel the last three were found to be on fire.

The American Journal of Science gives a remarkable instance of the spontaneous combustion of wood. A Mr. Adam Reigart, two years previous to the occurrence, received a piece of wood, supposed to be cedar, detached from a large piece dug up thirty-nine feet below the surface, near Lancaster, Penn. The piece weighed a few ounces, and it was broken in two and laid upon a white-pine shelf. Mr. Reigart's son, a young man, about four days before the discovery of the fire he had occasion to wipe the dust from the shelf and from the piece of cedar with a wet cloth. Three days afterward it was discovered that the piece of wood had ignited and combustion was proceeding so rapidly that in a few minutes the shelf would have been on fire.

He Didn't Get Mixed.

The Lewistown (Me.) Journal says: "A cross-eyed old fellow, with his chin and throat muffled in a luxurious crop of hair, got off a Central train in Auburn a few days ago. He deliberately fished a chunk of chalk from his breeches pocket and marked a good-sized white cross on one of the cars. He then asked the way to the 'pump' and took a drink. When he got back to the train he was asked why he put the chalk-mark on the car. 'My wife told me,' said he, 'not to get off the train at all, for fear I might get in the wrong keers. I thought I'd put a mark on the train so I should know it was the right one.'"

Meant Him.

When a railroad passenger hears the whistle sounding an alarm, it is his first impulse to look out of the window, but this impulse is often restrained by second thought, except in the case of green travelers. A few days ago an old man and his wife were passengers on a Lake Shore train, and as the section men were making repairs on the line in various places, the whistle was sounded pretty often. The old couple were fully alive to every "toot," and each time the old man would stick his head out of the window.

"Does it mean any thing, Samuel?" asked the wife every time his head came back, but he could give her no satisfactory explanation. A travel agent behind them finally warned the old man that he ran a risk by sticking his head out, but at the very next toot he was at it again. He wore a plug hat which looked fully twenty years old, and his loss would be nothing great. Preparations were quickly made behind him, and every thing was all ready when next the whistle sounded.

"I wonder what's on the track now?" queried the wife, as she moved around uneasily.

"I dunno," he replied; "I believe we've run over as many as a dozen men since we left Toledo."

Out went his head, his face toward the engine, and a smart rap with a cane from the next window knocked his hat off, and sent it flying into a swamp. He pulled back with such a rush that he almost went over the side.

"Land a shiner!" said it mean any thing?" she cried, as she grasped him.

"I should think it did," he yelled, "I meant that I was a durned old fool, and had got to go bareheaded all the rest of this summer!"

The hard-hearted conductor refused to stop the train and recover the hat, and at the end of a hot discussion the bare-headed victim brought his flat down with shivering force, and exclaimed:

"Well, now, I want you to understand that if there is a shiner in this land, and this railroad has got to move its fence corners back. 'Spoken them rails had given me a wife on the jaw!"

The Last of the Vespucci.

A decided sensation was created at Washington during the Van Buren administration by the appearance there of a handsome and well-educated Italian lady who called herself America Vespucci, and claimed descent from the navigator who gave his name to this continent. Ex-President Adams and Daniel Webster became her special friends, and she was soon a welcome guest in the best society. In a few weeks after her arrival she presented a petition to Congress asking, first, to be admitted to the rights of citizenship, and secondly, to be given "a corner of land" out of the public domain of the country which bore the name of her ancestor. An adverse report which was soon made, is one of the curiosities of Congressional literature. It eulogized the petitioner as "a young, dignified, and graceful lady, with a mind of the highest intellectual culture, and a heart beating with all our own enthusiasm in the cause of America."

Liberal as the reasons why the prayer of the petitioner could not be granted were given, but she was recommended to the generosity of the American people. "The name of America—our country's name—should be honored, respected and cherished in the person of the interesting exile from whose ancestor we derive the great and glorious title." A subscription was immediately opened by Mr. Haight, the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate, and judges, Congressmen and citizens vied with one another in their contributions. Just then it was whispered that Mad. Vespucci had borne an unenviable reputation at Florence and at Paris, and had been induced by a pecuniary consideration to break off an intimacy with the Duke of Orleans, Louis Philippe's oldest son, and come to Washington. Soon afterward the Duke's younger brother, the Prince de Joinville, came to this country and refused to recognize her, which virtually excluded her from reputable society. For some years subsequently she resided in luxurious seclusion with a wealthy citizen of New York, in the interior of that State, and after his death she returned to Paris.—Atlantic Monthly.

A Result of the Mississippi Jetties.

As a direct result of the success of Captain Eads' jetties at the mouth of the Mississippi River, is noted the present remarkable demand for huge grain carrying barges for the transportation of wheat from St. Louis to the ocean-going vessels at New Orleans. This demand for barges is supplemented by the recent purchase of several of the most powerful towboats ever built at Pittsburg, and which were originally designed for the coal trade. With 20 feet of draft, and a speed of 12 miles an hour, they are located at the river transportation of grain to ocean hulls bids fair to assume proportions that may jeopardize the overland carrying of grain between the Upper Mississippi and the seaboard. Within the past few weeks the St. Louis and New Orleans Transportation Company and the Mississippi Valley Transportation Company have been in the market as purchasers for steamers and barges. The latter of the variety known in Western waters as the "model" barge, in contradistinction to the coal or square barge. These craft are built to a model, and those recently contracted for are of the following dimensions: Length 225 feet, width 36 feet, hold 9 feet. The "cargo box" or receptacle for grain has a capacity for 60,000 bushels or about 1,500 tons. At present forty such barges are being built at different yards along the Ohio River, and the total number of barges that will soon find employment in the grain-carrying trade between the points named is placed by good authority at 120. A "low" of such barges consists, under favorable circumstances, of five, a loaded barge drawing about eight feet. To make the round trip between St. Louis and New Orleans requires twenty days, and the freight on wheat averages eight cents per bushel. The lack of return cargoes prevents this rate from being as great as a "bonanza" as would appear from an income of $24,000 for a three weeks' job. Nevertheless it is a good thing for those engaged in this wholesale way of sending grain down the "Father of Waters."—Scientific American.

Every Prince of the Royal Family in Germany is taught when young some useful trade for the purpose of sobering the mind and bringing it face to face with the material world and the realities of life, and among the profusion of curiosities and artistic relics which crowd the Emperor William's private cabinet may be seen a good-sized clock-bird, carving, carpentering and other handicraft work performed by his sons and grandsons.

This Detroit Free Press, which is good authority on such things, says: "Corkscrews can now be made and sold for a cent."

The Actor's Hard Times.

Take the histories of any of the great artists now so well known all over the English-speaking world—Miss Lotta, Maggie Mitchell, Annie Pixley, John T. Raymond, Billy Florence, Ed. Harrigan, John McCullough, Joe Murphy, the Williamses, Tony Hart, Emily Rigg, Annie Ward Tiffany and others, whose names would fill a column. All of these struggled against fate, and would have crumpled lost had not persevering people how terrible were the hardships some of these persons endured, and how gigantic were the obstacles to be overcome. Miss Annie Pixley, who has made such a reputation in "Miss," told us herself, when she was played at the Standard theatre last season, that she went through scenes of the Golden States that were calculated to appeal the stoutest-hearted men in her company. Frequently she had no better stage on which to play than three billiard tables put together. Five or six shawls pinned together sufficed for a drop-curtain, and the scenery was lit up by tallow dips. Imagine a Lady Macbeth on a billiard table, or a melancholy Dane on a green baize cloth. Miss Lotta began her theatrical career at San Francisco in the rear of Mike Cohen's cheap John store as a jig dancer. Ed. Harrigan was a canker, but discovered one night on the Pacific slope that he could do more with burnt cork than he could with oakum and pitch. Maggie Moore and Mary Anderson could tell queer stories of their early struggle for fame west, and John T. Raymond would make quite a respectable sum of money by the publication of the memoirs of his life and its vicissitudes.—Exchange.

Sod Houses.

On the prairies, far from the woods, where log cabins are impracticable, the sod house is made as a substitute. To build one, a man goes on to the prairie with his team and breaking plow, and turns a straight smooth sod some three or four inches thick. This sod is very tough. When sufficient has been turned over the sod is cut into squares and laid up in a wall as though it were flatstones. Door frames and window frames are set in as story is reached a small timber is set up at each end, and a ridge-pole placed upon them, and the sod wall built up or into the gable. On this ridge there rest smaller poles for rafters, and on these sod is laid in courses, the courses overlapping each other like shingles, "so many inches to the weather." The only money outlay is caused by windows and doors. If well built, the house will stand for years. Inside one may "swagon to taste." In the outer walls the walls are left uncovered. In others some are covered with cheap cloth, some with building paper and wall paper pasted over it, while some are plastered and made as comfortable as any room need to be. Once inside, you would not know but you were in a stone or brick house. Then you will sometimes find elegant furniture, the remains of better days, sometimes a piano and the skill to play it, choice books, which indicate literary tastes; the latest papers and magazines, which show that the inmates keep up with the times. Indeed, it is surprising to know how many families of refinement and cultured taste, being unfortunate, make a fresh start in life on the vast prairies.

An Eel Story.

Not long since a well on the farm of Almer Welsh, near Orangeville, Pa., in consequence of impurities in the water, was cleaned, and when the water was pumped out there was found in the edge of the well near the bottom the decaying remains of a large eel. The history of this eel runs as follows: In the summer of 1859 Joseph Hughes, who then resided on this farm, caught a number of eels, among which was one enormous, which he took great pride in exhibiting to his neighbors. The eels were left over night in a vessel standing on the well floor and in the morning the large eel was gone. The natural supposition was that it had been stolen, but the truth was that it had squirmed out of the tub, worked its way through the floor and fell twenty-three feet into the water. Some years later it was seen by a man cleaning the well. On account of the sandy bottom and abundance of water all attempts to catch it were fruitless. From time to time it was seen by persons cleaning the well, until this season, when, the water becoming tainted, the well was again cleaned and his remains were found. Before the visitation of this eel small lizards were so plentiful in the well that great care had to be taken in using the water. Since then scarcely any have been found till this summer. Now they have again made their appearance.

—The Clayton Jubilee Singers, who have won such a good reputation throughout the Northwest, were the guests of the Myers house last evening while waiting for the Broadhead train. They sang in that town last night.

—It is against the statute law of Wisconsin to catch pike or black-bass in any waters of this State from the first of February to the first of May. This item is published for the benefit of our piscatorial friends who persist in throwing in their hooks regardless of what takes hold.

—Charles Saunders, the business manager of the Clayton Jubilee Singers, (who were in the city for a short time yesterday, waiting for the cars), is a native of Janesville, being the son of George F. Saunders, well known here during the late war. He is now a resident of Canada.

—One year ago to-day came the third great snow blockade of the season. It was wind, wind, wind, and snow, snow, snow, and business was generally suspended, and strange as it may seem, on that day and on the day following, there was not a railway train in motion in all the State.

—Marshal Hogan captured a thief this afternoon who had taken a coat from the store table in front of R. M. Bostwick's store. The marshal captured his man in the neighborhood of the cotton factory, after he had sold the coat for a nominal price to a man near the depot. The property was recovered and the prisoner is in jail awaiting trial.

—Fred Sonneborn, of the Star Clothing House, returned home yesterday, from New York, where he purchased a large stock of spring goods for his store. The goods will be here in a day or two, when his many customers will be welcomed to call, inspect and make their selections. Fred says he has procured many new novelties in his stock.

—While Mr. S. C. Pope was attempting to get in his buggy near the depot to-day noon, an engine frightened the horse which caused him to run away. He ran down Academy street at full speed but striking the corner of the fence belonging to Mr. Doe, on the corner of Academy and West Milwaukee was stopped. One wheel of the buggy was badly broken, otherwise no damage was done.

—Mr. Burton's benefit will be given at the Opera house to-night, when he will give "Josh Whitcomb" and "Irish Doctor"—a double bill and a double amount of fun. During the performance Mr. Ridensky will play the violin and piano at the same time, producing a very fine overture. If any one thinks this can not be done, let him go to the Opera house to-night and find himself happily disappointed. Mr. Woodyatt will also give a cornet solo. Mr. Burton having been a resident of Janesville, and well-known in the city, the benefit tendered him will be a hearty and a successful one.

AMUSEMENTS.

ZIZI.

One of the brightest plays given by the Herbert Combination so far during their engagement here, is "Zizi," which was played before a good audience at the Opera house last night. There are some very telling situations in it, much excellent acting, and numerous happy and comical situations. Mrs. Goodrich took the title role in which she did some splendid acting. The play gives her a better opportunity to show her abilities than any drama which the company has yet played. She is especially strong in the title part and won, what she thoroughly deserved, the hearty applause of the audience. The character which produced the laughter and that constantly whenever on the stage, was Gustavus Dellamaria, (a would be actor) taken by Mr. J. W. Burton. That part is full of ludicrous situations and very humorous hits, and Mr. Burton played it with his utmost skill. Mrs. Burton did some fine acting as Ethel the cripple; and Marion Bent, as Mme. Husson, was exceedingly good in her part. Mr. Harry Wentworth as Esso sustained his reputation as a careful actor, and Walter Richardson as George Adry, acted his part exceedingly well.

To-night Mr. Burton will be given a benefit when he will give "Joshua Whitcomb" and "Irish Doctor." It is safe to predict that there will be a crowded house.

THE CONCERT.

The concert to be given at the Guards armory will take place to-night. The admission will be only 15 cents. The programme is an excellent one and will attract a large audience.

National Beverages.

France is gradually changing its national beverage from wine to beer. In Paris alone the consumption has increased 233,000 hectolitres in sixteen years. What the effect of the change will be is a nice question in ethnology which the savants will probably study well. The world is divided as much by its drinks as by its races or its geographical boundaries. The beer country is almost entirely German, coming to a focus at Munich, where the best brew and the best examples of purely Gothic civilization are to be found. England's ale is practically beer with a little change in the fluid as there is in the English tongue. All the Teutons drink brewed liquors; all the Latins wines all the Celts whisky, all the Slavs vodka. In the far East, coffee in Arabia and tea in China take the places of the alcoholic beverages. In fact, it is easier to distinguish a man by his tipple than by his tongue. Every change in race foods has been followed by a change in race character, and France will be no exception to the rule. If beer continues to displace wine we may look forward to the growth of a steadygoing, conservative element in Gallic life which will ballast and direct its enthusiasms—which will add to it that staying, stable power, which is the one thing France needs to lead the world.

ANTS.—There is one way, and only one, of ridding the house, closets, cupboards, sugar barrels, etc., of red ants or black, big or little. When you find them on your premises get ready tea kettles of boiling water, plenty of it. Go out of doors, look carefully over the paths and walks, if in the country; if in the city, look over the flagging in the areas, both front and back. Scald every little hole you see with a mound of little earth pellets around it: it is the home of the ant. On a sunny day these pellets are brought out of the nests to dry. When the weather is damp, or soon will be, you will see nothing but little holes in the ground. The ants are all "at home." Scald them. If your cellar is not cemented hunt the pests there; very likely you will find lots of them. When the work here recommended has been done, clean out your closets, sugar pails, everything in the closets, rub fine salt on the shelves, lay clean yellow paper on them, and put back dishes. In the cracks of the floor and around the surline of said closets should be placed ground red pepper. Ants will not come again for a long time. When they again make a raid, as they may, in a few months, give them a second scalding.

The "Devil" in American Geography.

The number of lakes, slides, ovens, gates, bridges, towers, bluffs, falls, ketches, creeks, etc., that have had the word "devil" attached to them is simply immense. From the forests of Maine to the adobe villages on the Mexican border and the Dalles of the Columbia, there is hardly a locality that has not remembered his Satanic majesty. The best known Devil's Gate, on the line of the Union Pacific Railroad, is that a few stations east of Ogden, and in Utah. It is a wild, picturesque spot, and one worth a visit of the tourist. There are a good many Devil's Gates, and no doubt, in the christening of the Sweetwater, the miners found it convenient to give the ubiquitous party a way out of that country. —Chicago Inter-Ocean.
